I look at you and I know that it will be the last time I'll see you.
I listen to you and I know that it will be the last time I'll hear your voice.
Just a few hours, maybe less, and it will end.
You say you don't want me to cry, but I can't stop the tears from running down my face.
You say that the last thing you want to see is my smile.
But how can I smile when I know that you'll be dead in the next hour?
It's now four weeks ago that the doctor told us about your incurable illness.
And now our remaining time is nearly over.
I know I can't help you but I wish so hard that I could.
We used to push it aside during the first days in order to enjoy the time that was left.
I'm feeling so helpless seeing you now.
I know it will be a release for you, but I just can't let you go.
You're so skinny. You weren't able to eat these last days.
I promised to bring our crew home and I'll do it, but this ship will never be the same without you.
And you ask me to smile.
You don't want to see my tears.
Your heartbeat weakens and your voice is so low I can barely hear you.
Again tears run down my face and I smile for you Kathryn.
I smile because I want your last wish to be fulfilled.
Your wonderful blue eyes close and the last words that come from your lips is "Thank you".
Your heart stops beating.
You're dead.
You died in my arms and I couldn't do anything to save you.
I cry.
I never imagined that the end of our time would come so fast.
But I will never forget you.

Good bye Kathryn
